The Changing Nature of Scotland

Perth Concert Hall, Mill Street, Perth, PH1 5HZ, Scotland
17th – 18th September 2009, with an evening reception on 16th September

A conference for everyone with an interest in a healthy environment

Purpose:

How do changes in our land, water and seas affect us, our businesses and our health?
Why should changes in our natural environment matter to us?

The conference will take stock of changes to our natural environment. Together, with you and our partners within the rural and environment agencies, we will probe the reasons for change, what needs to be done to make things better and why this matters to Scotland and its people.

Content:

Keynote talks will place Scotland's nature and the wider environment in an international context and review drivers of change - notably climate, land use, social issues and the economy.

Organisers:

The 2009 SNH conference is organised in conjunction with Scotland's Environmental and Rural Services (SEARS) partners: Animal Health (AH); Cairngorms National Park Authority (CNPA); Crofters Commission (CC); Deer Commission Scotland (DCS); Forestry Commission Scotland (FCS); Loch Lomond & The Trossachs National Park Authority (LLTNPA); Scottish Government Rural Payments and Inspections Directorate (SGRPID); Scottish Government (SG); and Scottish Environment Protection Agency (SEPA).
